Creative team-building through storytelling, sculpture, and reflection. This interactive workshop blends storytelling, collaborative reflection, and hands-on sculpture to help teams explore strengths, build trust, and unlock creative thinking. Participants create a symbolic Guardian Monster representing their unique strengths and the qualities that support their success within the team. Through guided exercises, anonymous peer recognition, and collaborative brainstorming, teams design and sculpt meaningful guardian figures in clay. The process encourages appreciation, psychological safety, and imaginative problem-solving while producing a memorable physical artifact.

Workshop Outcomes

Participants gain both a creative artifact and measurable workplace benefits associated with hands-on creative engagement.

Research shows that tactile creative activities like sculpting can reduce stress, increase focus, and support creative problem-solving by engaging sensory and motor systems in the brain. The workshop also incorporates structured peer recognition, helping teams identify and celebrate one another's strengths—an approach linked to higher employee engagement and stronger team cohesion.

By translating ideas into physical form, participants reinforce learning through embodied experience while building a shared creative memory that strengthens workplace culture and psychological safety.
